

Phrystling by Joseph D. Smith

When you are tired of arm and thumb wrestling, try a new sport, and that sport is now available in the public domain! That sport is called Phrystling, a.k.a. Hooked-Finger Wrestling, where two or more opponents hook their index fingers together, then they try to wrestle their opponent(s) fingers open! Whoever still has their finger locked in a hook is the winner!

You can go about this sport in several different ways, which can be customized much like Greco-Roman wrestling, or it can even be used as a spectacle, much like pro-wrestling! When you play this sport, the most common and basic way to play is to only use your locked fingers to try and unhook your opponent, but it can be played with more skill and combat, where you can use any part of your body, even to the point of attacking each other, as long as the hooks are still applied!

Want to take this sport to the extreme? Squeeze your opponent(s) finger to cut-off blood flow, or twist their wrists! If you can imagine it, you will more than likely have fun doing it! Make this sport your own, as it, as mentioned, is now in the public domain! When you are strong, make sure you are facing someone who will be safe to compete with, as you could end up breaking someone's fingers!

Do you want to entertain other people? Make sure that they can see the action, because you can end up being turned the wrong way, where people can't see you! Just face in the right direction when possible. You can either engage in direct-competition, or you can script the battle! It may only be the fraction of the entertainment of a pro-wrestling match, or it may end up being a high-end spectacle, and who knows! You could end up being one of the first Phrystling stars!

So, when is this sport going to kick off the ground? Only when those of you who are interested in this sport make it happen! Make videos, make recordings, or even go on the radio! Entertain your friends, family, and fans! Phrystling is a great event strategy, and it could generate interest in your cause, business, or event! When you make this sport popular, it will be in your domain.

In summary; when you are tired of every ordinary, everyday games and sports, when they become boring, try Phrystling! Phrystling can be customized to every need and interest. This sport can be both fun and entertaining, while you can also make it into an extreme match! Phrystling is only the beginning.
